Dear MoveOn member,

Wow. In 2 days, MoveOn members across the nation signed up to host over 900 "Yes We Can" parties to get out the vote for Barack Obama in Texas! And yesterday, Bill Clinton said that if Obama wins Texas on March 4, he'll win the nomination.<sup>1</sup>

So on Sunday, March 2, we're holding the biggest phone bank in presidential primary history. Folks everywhere will come to Obama parties armed with cell phones—ready to call thousands of Texas MoveOn members whose votes could put Obama over the top on March 4.

Can you help us reach 1,000 Obama parties by hosting one in your living room on Sunday, March 2, at 4 p.m.? To host a party, click here:

There will be a lot of interest in making calls—people will just need a place to go. If ever there were a Sunday afternoon to help Obama, this is it.

You don't have to know anything about Texas voting to host, and you don't need tons of phone lines. We'll get you all the information you need and folks will bring their own phones. We'll also help you build your crowd.

At these parties, we'll make sure folks know about the unusual primary-plus-caucus system in Texas, which allows voters to double their impact. If we can get our 125,000 MoveOn members in Texas to flood primary and caucus

900 people signed up to host "Yes We Can" Obama parties March 2—where we'll help Obama clinch the nomination by calling Texas MoveOn members.

Dear KIN folk,

We have a rare and important opportunity to bring a critical issue to prime time. With Super Tuesday primaries looming the Democratic California debate is tonight and hosted by CNN, Politico and the Los Angeles Times. The Politico website gives us the opportunity to vote on which questions should be asked of the candidates and of course we want to keep just recovery on the agenda!

Please go to katrinaaction.org/PresDebate for more specific instructions on how to vote. Please go to dyn.politico.com/debate/democrats/VoteForQuestion.cfm and click on the "Most Popular" tab to cast your vote for:

Dear Arif,

More than forty years after the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 -- which was supposed to help level the playing field in the workplace -- Black men still make 75 cents for every dollar that White men make, and Black women make only 68 cents.<sup>1</sup> One factor contributing to the gap is discriminatory pay based on race, ethnicity, and gender, which was outlawed by the Act.

Last May, the Supreme Court made it nearly impossible for employees to challenge discriminatory pay under the Civil Rights Act. Congress now has the opportunity to restore equal pay protections by passing the Fair Pay Restoration Act. The bill passed the House of Representatives along party lines but is stalled in the Senate -- will you join us in calling on your senators to support it?

<http://www.colorofchange.org/equalpay/?id=2324-72888>

Pay discrimination is a real problem for people of color and women -- in 2006, 4,905 pay discrimination claims were filed. 2,038 of those claims were about race-based discrimination, 2,308 were gender-based, and 577 were based on national origin.<sup>2</sup> As bad as the problem is, serious progress has been made since Congress passed pay discrimination protections in the 60s. But the Supreme Court's decision threatens to reverse that progress and widen the wage gap.

Under the Civil Rights Act of 1964, employees have 180 days to challenge an act of discrimination. Until now, courts have treated each discriminatory paycheck as a discriminatory act. But last year, in Ledbetter v. Goodyear, the Supreme Court ruled 5-4 that only the initial decision about an employee's pay can be considered, meaning employees must act within 180 days of being hired at discriminatory wages or being given a discriminatory raise.<sup>3</sup>

It takes most employees much longer to discover they are being discriminated against -- discussing wages with co-workers is illegal in some states, and many employers have strict policies against it. Lilly Ledbetter, the plaintiff in the Supreme Court case
